

NFPA REQUIRED SIGNAGE

National Fire Protection Agency (NFPA) code requires stair floor identification signs in all buildings with over 4 floors.

NFPA Code requires stairwell signs with photoluminescent copy that provides good visibility of level identification, point of egress, and direction of travel to egress that is easily read in daylight or blackout conditions.

These signs provide occupants and fire department personnel with easy to read stairwell information. It's important that, in the event of an emergency, everyone is familiar with what stair landing they are on, as well as the exit discharge of each stairwell.
